Benefiting directly from those government measures, the Group recorded strong growth in its overall operating results. In Mainland China, the Group continues to operate on a sales model with direct sales operation marketing strategies. During the period under review, the Group adjusted its marketing system in the PRC and rejuvenated its management teams in major cities by recruiting hire caliber people at competitive wages, upgrading after-sale services and increasing competitiveness. At the same time, the Group achieved smooth progress in overseas market expansion. Efforts to promote the "EVOC" brand gradually took effect in Europe, the Middle East, Russia and India. After preliminary surveying and preparation work was completed, the overseas market sales team of the Group started negotiation for overseas market agency and setting up of branch companies in major cities with promises of strong sales growth.

During the review period, the Group strengthened influence in the APA sector and the attractiveness of its products to the market through mounting marketing efforts including advertising in professional media, organizing industrial exhibitions, participating in technology exchange fairs, industrial application seminars, summit forums and customer association activities. OUTLOOK AND PROSPECTS

Currently, China’s information technology construction is undergoing strategic transformation — industrial structures are being streamlined and products are taking on richer technological contents. Development of more technologically advanced APA (Advanced Process Automation) products, in particular, will be crucial to enhancing the “Made In China” brand and upgrading industrial applications will drive growth of traditional industries in the country. These developments are going to create tremendous market demands and in turn favorable development opportunities for the APA industry in China. Compared with Europe and the U.S., where APA is relatively better developed, China’s APA industry has more local features with its main drive coming from domestic demand. The Board believes market demand for APA products will remain strong in 2009.

To cater to the rapidly expanding APA market, the Group will focus on developing more advanced industrial applications for its products and also expanding the share of its application products in key industrial sectors, including energy (safety control of coal mines), transportation (railway transportation control), environmental protection (pollution sources monitoring) and 3G communications. Such endeavors will allow the Group to establish a strong foundation for expanding into other similar APA application areas. The Group will also continue to enlarge the EVOC Central Research Institute, strengthen interaction between and integration of research and development and marketing efforts, as well as adjust research and development strategy and direction based on market feedbacks, thereby maintain its leadership in technology and product innovation.

Heeding development trends in the APA market and change in demand of key customers, the Group will continue to extend its production chain to cover research, development and sale of peripheral products. It will also strive to expand sales to overseas markets by establishing and perfecting its overseas marketing system and increasing export sales.
